Cause of Spill	A roll from a paint roller being used by a crew member came off the roller and fell into the water.
Cleanup Actions	The roll was retrieved without delay from the water without any run off, sheen or discoloration noted.
Comments	The crew members were painting the anchor area on the starboard side. They were in a carriage with an apron to catch any paint, chips or debris. The crew members were using rollers to apply the paint. One of the blue paint rolls slipped off the roller and into the water below. I observed this at 0945, notified the EO at 0951 and he in turn notified the Bosun for the roll to be retrieved. The roll was immediately retrieved by a member of the Bosun's team. No paint appears to have emanated from the roll while in the water before being retrieved; no sheen or discoloration of the area noted. Corrective action being considered is a means devised to prevent a roll from sliding off the paint roller.
